Social Cohesion, Public Policy Reformation, and Market Integration towards Inclusive Global Economy

About the Conference

Over the past three decades, globalization has significantly accelerated the dynamic of the global economy and even borderless countries. The dynamic global economy occurs not only in the flow of trade of goods and services but also in the investment, business, financial system, human capital and social mobility, as well as technology. These rapidly growing activities are providing new opportunities to engage in an inclusive global economy.

However, many developed countries are experiencing slow economic growth. It is reflected in their weak output and investment, which can decrease productivity, innovation, and competitiveness in the global market. While the economy is growing in emerging countries, they are also facing the inequality in development, social cohesion, demographic pressure, climate change, and technology. Consequently, this brings new challenges to improve the instrument of policy, to maximize the synergies to face globalization, and to achieve greater prosperity.

Hence, it is important and relevant to explore issues, problems, and policies in global economic challenges. The 3rd International Conference on Economics, Business, and Accounting Studies (ICEBAST) invites the policy makers, academicians, business managers, researchers, and students to discuss and to explore in depth the ways to achieve inclusive global economy. We invite papers with the theme of "Social Cohesion and Business Innovation towards Inclusive Global Economy". The papers may include the following sub-themes, though not limited to them.
