We Grow and Transform

The first publication of the Bulletin of Monetary Economics and Banking (BMEB) was successfully launched by Bank Indonesia on July 1998 (Volume 1, No.1). The journal's launch coincided with the Asian financial crisis, and hence BMEB has published many valuable policy papers. After twenty years of development, the BMEB has now embarked on a vision of becoming a leading and respected journal, not only in the Asia-Pacific region but globally.

In the Asia-Pacific region, no central bank has an academic journal. Arguably, Bank Indonesia is the only central bank which has a journal that has been publishing articles from both academic and policy perspectives for several years. A good quality journal published out of a central bank is a mark and reflection of research identity and strength. Bank Indonesia has a well-developed platform from which to lead central bank research in the region. The journal offers a great opportunity to lead policy debates combined with robust academic research that makes use of new datasets in understanding monetary economics and banking issues that matter to the global economy.

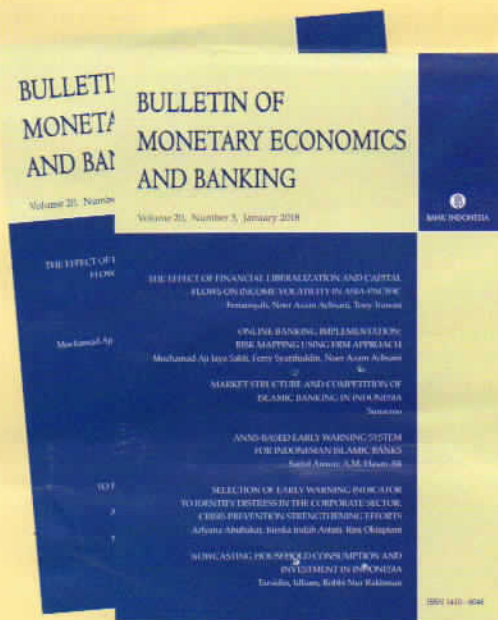

With a world renowned editorial team, led by Professor Paresh Narayan, the BMEB welcomes papers relating to monetary economics, finance, banking, macroprudential regulation, payment systems, international economics, development economics, and economic growth.
